Dear Diary, November 21, 1911
A group of us went gathering late chestnuts at the edge of our woodlands and I had a most remarkable day!
A certain young gentleman and I ended up sharing a basket and somehow we ended up alone for a moment. As I reached down to collect a cluster, he reached for the same pile and our hands touched!
Well almost, since the prickly pods cannot be gathered without the use of stout leather gloves. Now, the thought that counts. Now, 'Lucky Day' Mother has suggested we host a Chestnut Roasting party for a few friends, since it is the season.
Guess whom I hope to invite?
